Is the container shipping industry heading into a prolonged period of overcapacity?
The container shipping industry is heading into a prolonged period of overcapacity, with analysts warning that supply will continue to outpace demand until at least 2028. Read also: Unexpected Early Peak in U.S. Container Import Volumes Why is China letting solar companies fail?

The government decided 15 years ago to put extensive support behind solar power, and then let the companies claw it out. Beijing has shown a high tolerance for letting firms stumble and even fail in large numbers. Robots at a factory in China's Xinjiang region in May.

Is China's solar panel industry in upheaval?
The country's solar panel exports, measured by how much power they can produce, jumped another 10 percent in May over last year. But China's solar panel domestic industry is in upheaval. Wholesale prices plummeted by almost half last year and have fallen another 25 percent this year.

Why are Chinese solar companies slashing prices?
Chinese manufacturers are competing for customers by cutting prices far below their costs, and still keep building more factories. The price slashing has taken a severe toll on China's solar companies. Stock prices of its five biggest makers of panels and other equipment have halved in the past 12 months.

Will container carriers' earnings bottom out in 2028?
Looking ahead, Braemar expects container carriers' earnings to bottom out in 2028, just as a wave of new vessels hits the water and Red Sea transits potentially resume. Roach warned that ongoing uncertainty will remain a key variable: "Unexpected developments will impact the global economy and have a knock-on impact on liner fortunes."

Are China's automakers following the solar industry's lead?
Something similar is happening in the automotive sector. Annual car sales in China are around 25 million, more than any other country but barely half the country's ability to make vehicles. So automakers in China are now following the solar industry's lead in cutting prices sharply and ramping up exports.
